THE MAYOR REFUSES TO SIGN

Cheque For The Purchase of The Malcolm Property For Fire Hall Site

Mayor Lyon sprang a great surprise on the councillors at the meeting held on Monday evening last when he informed them that he would not attach his signature to a cheque for the payment for lots for a fire hall site as passed unanimously at the last regular meeting of the council at which meeting he was not present. He thought that at the council should accept the free site near the telephone office as offered them by the West Canadian Collieries and which offer was accepted at a ratemakers' meeting held about a month ago. "I am willing to have my case referred to the lieutenant-governor of this province," stated His Worship. "Or if you are willing I am satisfied to have a referendum taken on the matter or have all the council resign and a new election held. I am here to do the bidding of the ratemakers and I intend to do my best to see that their wishes are carried out."

Councillor McLeod was surprised at the mayor for not being willing to carry out the wish of the majority of the councillors and refusing to sign a cheque, on behalf of the council, as payment for the proposed fire hall site agreed upon at the last regular meeting held on 13th inst. "When the matter of a site for a fire hall was first brought up, which was at a meeting held several weeks ago, you, Mr. Mayor, said that the best place to have a fire hall was on Mr. W. A. Malcolm's property which the council agreed last week to purchase but which you now refuse to accept," said the councillor who polled the largest number of votes at the last election. Continuing, Councillor McLeod said, "The business people want the fire hall near the centre of the town, and why should not their wishes be carried out? Mr. Mayor, I am surprised at the change which has taken place in you so quickly."

Mayor Lyon—"I am willing to stand on my record and to appear on a public platform at any time and show that whatever I have done has been to the interest of the town. I have already offered to resign if the other members of the council are willing, and let the people decide this matter by vote."

Councillor McLeod—"When the mayor refuses to abide by the majority vote of the council he should resign as he impedes the work of this body. For my part, I am doing my best for the interest of the people who elected me to office and I do not intend to resign my seat."

Councillor Dutil thought that the council should pay Mr. Malcolm for his property and should commence immediately the erection of a fire hall. "The most valuable buildings and the greatest danger from fire is in the business section," declared the man who has held a seat in the council longer than any other member, "therefore the more compact business blocks with their large stocks of valuable merchandise should be protected

Miner Fleets Untimely Death at Carbondale

The Italian community at Carbondale was suddenly plunged into mourning at 3 p.m. on Saturday afternoon last when the news of the death of one of their own countrymen, Domenico Beganio, was borne over the hills from the mines of the McGillivray Creek Coal & Coke Co., at Carbondale, a mining camp adjoining Coleman on the west.

Beganio was uncoupling ears in the mine when the accident occurred, his head becoming jammed between two cars as the train was rounding a curve and death was instantaneous.

Deceased was about 32 years of age, was married and had just completed arrangements to have his wife come out from Sunny Italy. He was a great favorite amongst his own countrymen.

Blairmore Chinamen Are Found Guilty

Lee Tuck and Lung Tan, who always said they were "dead broke" although they conducted a large laundry and a fairly good grocery business on Dearborn street, Blairmore, and were able to secure the services of some of the best legal lights in this province to appear for them at the sittings of the supreme court at which sittings those celestials were charged with having committed perjury in connection with cases which occupied the attention of the local court about the latter part of March, were on Saturday afternoon last, found by a jury of twelve, to be guilty of the charge laid against them. The jury, however, asked Chief Justice Harvey to show clemency when giving sentence because the prisoners were foreigners and were not able to understand our language thoroughly. The judge said that he would reserve sentence until the completion of the sittings.

from the ravages of fire in preference to isolated dwellings. I do not believe in totally ignoring the just demands of those outside of the business section, but let us use good judgment and place the fire hall where it is needed most."

Councillor Sinclair said that he was going to use his best judgment in supporting a site for the fire hall, he was elected to serve the people well and he intended to do so. He denied the charge made by the mayor at a recent public meeting, that he (Sinclair) was financially interested in the proposed site for the fire hall, and declared that he had not had one five cents' interest in the property, offered by Mr. Malcolm, since 16th March, 1911, which was about six months before the town was incorporated. He further stated that if such accusations were ever repeated in his hearing by the mayor or by any other person he would ask them to prove their charge.

The following motion was moved by Councillor Dutil and was seconded by Councillor Sinclair, "That the secretary-treasurer write to the attorney-general asking for a ruling when the mayor of the town refuses to execute a resolution carried by a majority of the councillors at a regular meeting. This was carried by the mover and second. Councillor Farmer voted against it, while Councillor Chestnut retired earlier in the evening.

GRADE FOR VICTORIA ST.

Plans As Arranged By Messrs. Woods & Steele Are Recommended

BLAIRMORE'S MAIN HIGHWAY

Will Be Put In Such Condition As To Avoid Any Future Inconvenience

The adjourned meeting of the Blairmore town council opened in the Beebe block at 8 p.m., on Monday evening last. Councillor Smith was the only absentee. This councillor tendered his resignation as one of the town fathers, giving as his reason that he was moving away from the district and would find it impossible to attend to town duties. His resignation was forthwith accepted, and an election to fill the vacancy will be held in the near future.

It was agreed by the council to pay Dr. Baker, the health officer for the town, an annual salary of $150.

It was moved by Councillor McLeod and seconded by Councillor Farmer that the public works committee advertise for tenders for building sidewalks and crossings as per plans and specifications.

Councillor Sinclair protested against placing telephone poles in centre of lots or near people's back doors as was being done between 7th and 8th avenues. The mayor and all the councillors agreed that such obstruction should not be, whereupon the mayor promised to see that the wish of the council in this respect would be carried out.

Councillor Sinclair in addressing the council on the subject of grading said, "I recommend a plan prepared by Messrs. Woods & Steele for the grading of Victoria street, which plan I have laid on the table. Our main thoroughfare, which has long been full of chuck holes, especially during the past few months, should be graded and put in a much better condition. In its present condition, Blairmore's main business street is a great drawback to the town and casts a bad reflection on those who have the handling of the town's affairs and on all those who live herein. Although upwards of $100,000 is being expended on hotels and other buildings on Victoria street there is no elevation for lots neither is there any way for builders to know the future grade of that street unless the council take action in the matter. At present the people carrying on building operations in the business section are being greatly handicapped because of no fixed grade and no means to know the right elevation of the streets."

Councillor Dutil—"Victoria street in its present scandalous condition is a very bad advertisement for the town and makes most unfavorable impression on all those who visit this place. It is a great hindrance to the town and should be improved at once."

It was moved by Councillor Farmer and seconded by Councillor McLeod that plan of grading Victoria street as prepared by Woods & Steele be approved of by the council. This, unlike the former motion, was put to a vote and carried.

Moved by Councillor Farmer and seconded by Councillor Dutil that the public works committee secure plans for a fire hall to cost about $5,000. This was also put to a vote and carried.

When speaking about the proposed fire hall, Councillor Sinclair thought that if sufficient funds for the construction of a large building were not available that a small fire hall should be erected in such a way that an addition may be made thereto whenever necessary, at a small expense. "Such as was done in the building of the public school," added the speaker.

Councillor Dutil's remarks coincided with the former speaker's, and he concluded by saying "Although some do not approve of the way the school was built, I believe that it would be a very wise step on the part of the town council to follow the example set by the school board."

BOWSER CURIOUS.

An Astrologist Gives Him Some Information.

MRS. B. SUPPLYING CONTEXT.

And the Facts He Has Collected Entirely Fail to Upset or Worry Her. The Coming of the Mysterious Man With News.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1912, by the Associated Literary Press.

MRS. BOWSER wasn't ill. He was just quiet, the same as any man is after he has got the worst of a horse trade.

After several attempts to engage him in conversation at dinner Mrs. Bowser gave it up. In his own good time he would start the family scrabble before him by his attitude. It was not until the meal was finished and they had returned to the sitting room that he plumed his throat and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I must kindly ask you to state what events have occurred here at the house since I left it this morning."

"Why, that's funny," she replied with a laugh.

"Perhaps so—perhaps not."

"Well, after you left I made the bed and did some sweeping."

"Yes."

"Then I told cook what we would have for dinner."

"Go on."

"Then I drummed on the piano a little while."

"I am listening."

"Let's see?"

The Insultation.

"Don't hesitate over it, Mrs. Bowser. If you are an innocent woman, you

"MRS. BOWSER HAD AN EXTRAVAGANT WIFE."

Don't have to him and how in telling what you did."

"What do you mean by that?" she demanded.

"Never your mind, but go ahead. What did you do after thumping on the piano for awhile?"

"I bought six bananas from a peddler and ate one."

"And then?"

"I made some alterations to my hat."

"Well."

"Then Mrs. Green came in for an hour."

"Yes?"

"And then your shrift came from the laundry and I put them away."

"And then?"

"Why, I was in the kitchen to see about the roast beef, and then I picked up a book and read until you came."

"And you look me in the face and tell me this is all?"

"Of course I look you in the face! I am not in the habit of looking at you behind the eek! What fool thing have you got into your head today?"

"Mrs. Bowser," he replied in solemn tones, after pacing three times across the room and back, "I have never doubted your loyalty to me until this hour. I have the very gravest reasons for asking you the questions I did."

"That's all! What is it you are trying to get at? Why don't you come out straight and plain?"

"What the Astrologer Said."

"Woman, there was an astrologer in the office today," he replied as he pointed a finger at her.

"Do you mean one of those humbugs that pretend to tell your past and future?"

"I mean, madam, one of those people who gets up in the morning and says to himself, 'What a marvelous gift has been given to me!'"

"Was it he or she?"

"It was a lady, madam."

"And she looked into your hand and told you you were born under the star of the brilliant cat and to make a fool of yourself every chance you get and then held out her own hand for $5—insurance and real estate must be dill when you can spare time to talkers."

"She was no faker, madam. She told me things that I had to believe in. Your attitude but confirms some of the things she said."

"Just how, please?"

"She said I had an extravagant wife."

"And did you tell her that our cook has more money to dress on than you allow me? Did you tell her that you spent more for cigars than my wardrobe comes to?"

"Mrs. Bowser opened his mouth to reply, but shut it again until ready to say:

"I asked you about the episode, but said you told me all, and yet at 9 o'clock this morning you wrote a letter and sent it away somewhere by a boy. Why did you suppress that episode—why?"

"Mrs. Bowser thought for a moment and then laughed and replied:

"Yes, it was a sort of letter. It was a day's order for the grocer's boy."

"Mr. Bowser gave a start of surprise, but quickly recovered it and said:

"And after Mrs. Green left a gentleman called. You also suppressed that information. You thought you had blundered now, but not so."

A Mysterious Caller.

"A gentleman?" she mused. "Oh, yes."

"Our minister was scattering the notices for an ice cream festival at the church Saturday evening. There it is on the piano. He left one at every house on the block. Did your father tell you that he fell down the last two steps as he went away?"

"Mr. Bowser had shot at the wrong target, but he braced up after a minute and said:

"The astrologer told me that my grandmother is dead. So what?"

"Yes, and I could have told you that she died from the kick of a cow. May be she also told you that your grandfather came to his death from eating foodstuffs from mushroom. Did she happen to mention that you had an uncle hanged in Missouri for horse stealing? That's the state where you've got to 'show me' it. Well, they showed your uncle, all right!"

"Woman, don't try to dodge this matter!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he remembered that the gravestone of his horse stealing uncle was inscribed with "Gone Up There."

"No, I won't," replied Mrs. Bowser. "Didn't she tell you that a third gentleman would call about half an hour before you got home? Well, he called. He wanted to sell you a guinea hen. He said that you must want something to love."

"Not another word in that strain; not another!"

"But I forgot to tell you that the garbage man called and said we must have a new garbage can."

"By the stars, I don't think I can put me down this way! I tell you that astrologer was right!"

"About what?"

"The Astrologer's Advice."

"Why—why—she said I must keep an eye on you!"

"Kind lady! Get your false whiskers and begin. I am now about to go upstairs. When I come down I shall stand at a front window for full minutes. I shall then go down to the kitchen and tell the cook about breakfast. Get on your feet and begin!"

There was one thing the astrologer had told Mr. Bowser that he hadn't adverted to. He was saving it for a last shot. He had said that a man would call in the evening to tell him some news that would eventually make him a rich man. He was waiting for the man to come. It was a knockdown blow for Mrs. Bowser. She had been gone upstairs for about five minutes when the door-bell rang. With a chuckle of exultation Mr. Bowser trotted down the hall and swung the door open. A man stood there with news on the tip of his tongue. The news was:

"Say, old cock-a-doodle, lend a feller 50 cents, won't yer?"

Mr. Bowser was in slippers and dressing gown, but he did not hesitate a moment. He dashed down the steps after the human devil, landed on his back at the gate, and it took Mrs. Bowser and the cook fifteen minutes to pry him loose from a snow drift and get him into the house.

"Did the astrologer say a tramp would rob it into you?"

"No," replied Mr. Bowser, "he asked as he came back to the world."

Mr. Bowser cuddled right down on the lounge and went to sleep. He could have said things, but what was the use?

UNCLE SUSPECTED TREASON.

Or Was Champ Clark 'Jir Talkin' to de Jury?"

WHEN Speaker Champ Clark of Missouri was prosecuting at the bar of the U. S. court, an old dorky came into his office at Louisiana one morning and after beating around the bushes for a few minutes brought forth the object of his visit.

"Wuz 'ya bawn in Kaintucky, Ma's Champ?" he inquired cautiously.

"Sure, Uncle Henry."

"A gentleman?" he asked. "Oh, yes."

NOT GUILTY.

There was a man rode on the cars, as he was late for the office.

He grabbed a seat whenever he could. For he worked from ten to six.

Mrs. Ann Jerusha Iveline Hinks had ideas of her own.

She figured out that trolley seats were scarce, and she decided to make the most of them.

She crept right up behind this man, whose name was Duncan Dillard, and she grabbed him by the collar.

She stabbed him in the stomach.

He died of course. They always do. The stomach is so touchy.

He was arrested by the police. A copper knows as Dutchy.

Enter upon the scene the oldest inhabitant, who always interfered everywhere and made himself a general nuisance.

The noise of the door opening caused Mr. Jones to look up. There stood old Dutchy, the old man's next question.

"Blumph," exclaimed the latter. "So you're a lawyer, are you?"

"Yes," replied the young man proudly.

"And what do you know about law?" was the old man's next question.

"Now, look here, Uncle John, you just be civil or I'll put you out of here."

The young lawyer's voice spoke of his rising anger.

"You can't put me out."

Quickly the young man swung round in his law abiding chair and seized one of the brand new books behind him. Quickly turning over the pages, he found a case against the law.

"If after due notice has been served upon a trespasser he still refuses to leave, sufficient force can be used to expel said trespasser from the premises."

"There's the law!" he cried in triumph.

But the old man squared his shoulders and thrust out his chin.

"That's so," he agreed. "But where's the force?"—London Answers.

"Is there any young man present who thinks one may safely disregard this wise rule?" asked the speaker.

Whereupon a youth in the rear of the hall arose and shouted in a stentorian tone:

"Yes, sir, I do!"

"And what," he demanded the angry and surprised speaker, "is the place which you yourself would think of visiting to which you could not take your sister?"

"The barber shop!" replied the youth.

Coleman Notes

Miss Dodds visited Blairmore on Saturday.

Dr. Bruce was up from Macleod this week.

The miners here are working good and indications point to a busy summer.

Wie Chong was a visitor to Pollett's saw mill, at the west end of Blairmore, on Sunday last.

H. G. Gondeve, F. Cote and the head clerk of the hardware store were visiting Blairmore and Frank on Sunday last.

Sick headache results from a disordered condition of the stomach, and can be cured by the use of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Alex. Cameron and E. Disney have been elected as delegates to attend the grand lodge of A. F. & A. M. which convenes at Edmonton next week.

For soreness of the muscles whetted by violent exercise or injury, Chamberlain's Liniment is excellent. This liniment is also highly esteemed for the relief it affords in cases of rheumatism. Sold by all dealers.

At the evening service at the Institutional church on Sunday evening last Rev. Mr. Bompas said that he believed the time was near at hand when party politics would be a thing of the past.

Now is the time to get rid of your rheumatism. You will find Chamberlain's Liniment wonderfully effective. One application will convince you of its merits. Try it. For sale by all dealers.

Constable Grant of the R.N.W. M.P., was down to Macleod this week as a witness on the Leslie theft case. Daniel Leslie is charged with having stolen about $215 from the Pacific hotel property, and at this writing he is awaiting his trial at the sittings of the supreme court.

Blairmore Brick Works

Resume Operations

After being closed down for repairs for several months, the Blairmore Brick Works resumed operations on Saturday last, and the old familiar whistle which had welcomed men to their daily occupation for many years past and had notified them when to return to their homes after a hard day's work, can now be heard doing its duty and casting a brighter aspect on things in the "Commercial Centre of The Pass."

The new man in charge of Blairmore's oldest industry is Mr. Lew Thorne, a person whose knowledge of brick and tile is second to none in this part of the country. Mr. Thorne has had 38 years experience at the business and the directors of the local brick manufacturing have been very fortunate in securing the services of such an expert.

Since the large plant was closed down last winter, the entire works have been overhauled and numerous improvements have been effected, thus putting the Blairmore plant on a par with any other in this province. The product now comes to be of superior grade to that previously manufactured here and the daily output may be increased so as to meet the present demand.

Editorial Notes

Roosevelt said last week that he was sure of victory, and just as we had almost made up our minds that the ex-president was correct along came Taft with the same assertion about himself and now we don't know which to believe. There is surely a deficiency some place.

Some people are so used to sending out of town for their groceries, dry goods and other necessities of life that they even advertise in out-of-town papers instead of patronizing home institutions. The people who do this are a menace to the community in which they live.

It is a true and trite saying, "Well begun is half done," and we insist that no school is right well begun that does not open with a good, round hearty song. It refreshes, brightens, pacifies discordant minds, soothes ruffled tempers and imparts a relish for the duties that follow.

Last Monday night's meeting of the Blairmore town council had a very exciting and dissimilar ending. The mayor refused to sign a cheque as authorized by a majority of the councillors and he forthwith offered to tender his resignation if the other members of the council would do likewise. There then followed an exchange of terms that were not over complimentary, and the spectators occupying places on the back benches were evidently enjoying the fracas as from that part of the building came forth numerous giggles.

It is very unfortunate that such a scene was created at the council meeting. It is a great pity that strife and discord still exist amongst many of our leading citizens and that the important matters which confront the town cannot be settled in a more amicable manner. The prosperity of a town is not guarded by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when any important undertaking is to be accomplished. Those who are always causing trouble should remember that no town will ever prosper where there is a division or strife of any nature. Pull together. In helping others you invariably help yourself. More towns die for want of public spirit than for any other cause. When a man in search of a home or a business location goes into a town and finds everything brim full of hope and enthusiasm of the prospects of the place, and all earnestly at work to build it up, he soon becomes imbued with the same spirit and goes to work with the same intention. When, however, he goes to a town where many of the so-called leading citizens express doubt and apprehension for the future prosperity of the place, and are snarling, whining and howling, moping about and indulging in mournful complaints he naturally feels that it is no place for him and he leaves with all speed for some other field. Consequently the town fathers should lead in trying and making Blairmore a live, enterprising town.

Happenings in and Around Blairmore

Capt. Beebe returned last week end from Edmonton.

Constable Meade returned from Macleod on Saturday evening.

Mr. Dubar returned from Lethbridge on Saturday evening last.

Lew Thorne, of Vancouver, B.C., is the new manager at the brick works.

Rev. W. H. Irwin, the Methodist pastor at Bellevue, was a visitor in town on Tuesday afternoon.

On Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Blairmore and Hillsdale will try conclusions in a baseball match.

Miss C. Lindsay came down from Calgary on Thursday last and is spending a few days with friends in town.

Rev. J. McL. Beaton, of Cayley, is expected to occupy the pulpit at the Presbyterian church, here, at both morning and evening services, on Sunday next.

J. D. S. Barrett, editor of this journal, went to Macleod on Wednesday morning as a delegate to attend the district meeting of the Methodist church.

Chief of Police Irwin went to Macleod on Saturday morning to appear as a witness on the Tuck and Tan trail. He returned in the evening.

Rev. A. S. Todd spent Sunday at Corbin, B. C., where he conducted divine services in the Presbyterian church. He returned to Blairmore on Monday.

Rev. J. Hamill, came down from Crows Nest on Saturday evening and on Sunday occupied the pulpit in the First Presbyterian church at both morning and evening services.

A. Rollins McLish, late editor and proprietor of the Redcliff Review is in town and is filling an important position in the construction of the telephone cable from Blairmore to Coleman.

Those wishing to enlist articles for auction sale, which is proposed to be held at Passburg in the near future, should arrange at once with J. M. Carter, auctioneer, Blairmore.

A. W. Robbins of Pincher Creek has opened an auto garage and livery stable here and hopes to receive a share of the large trade afforded by this town. See his ad. elsewhere in this issue.

The local branch of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will give an entertainment in the Budd hall, 848 Victoria street, on Monday evening next commencing at 7:45 o'clock. A lengthy program, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, readings, short addresses, dialogues etc. is being prepared for the occasion and those who attend are promised a very enjoyable evening. Refreshments will be served late in the evening and everybody is invited to take part. No admission fee will be charged but a collection in aid of the great work which is being carried on by the local organization will be taken up. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Rev. A. S. Todd left on Tuesday evening for London, Ont., where he will remain until the last of June when he will return to Blairmore for a short visit after which he may leave for larger fields of usefulness than Blairmore provides. It is rumored that the reverend gentleman has matrimonial designs and that shortly after his return to Alberta will unite himself with the Benedictine club after repatriating to a prosperous town in the northern part of this province. His many friends here deeply regret that he decided to leave this town after little over a year of active service, and they wish him abundant success into whatever field he may decide to carry on the work which he seems to be well suited for. A farewell party in honor of Rev. A. S. Todd was given at Mr. Bigelow's on Monday evening last.

Telephone Extension

The provincial government's telephone extension programme for this year is one of the most extensive in the history of Alberta, and one of the most important pieces of construction work at present being undertaken is going on right in Blairmore.

For upwards of two weeks a gang of expert mechanics and ground men, under the foremanship of Mr. William Ruse, have been with us and in that short space of time have not been idle in altering the face of our landscape. Mr. Ruse is tackling quite a big proposition when he proposes laying a complete new cable line between Blairmore and Coleman, and on the completion of this undertaking the existing service will be torn down and a service installed between the twin cities second to none in the province.

The accumulation of a forest of poles in the main street of a town is an ugly sight, and it is up to the citizens of Blairmore to be thankful that Mr. Ruse's party are placing the new line in the lands back of Victoria street and right away into the country to the west of us.

While the original government party which hails from Calgary only number about ten men, Mr. Ruse has found it necessary to engage a number of our townsmen for digging operations so that quite a large gang is now actively employed and the job is expected to last pretty well on towards fall. When finished and the old poles removed, Blairmore will have a much smarter and cleaner appearance all around.

The Squaw Plan

In presenting Mr. Geo. V. Dill in the now celebrated play, "The Squaw Man" Messrs. Beunett & Company feel they have effected a combination of Play and Star that can not be surpassed, for Mr. Dill has achieved so enviable a reputation in Western roles that he may be said to stand alone in the delineation of these types. It is universally agreed that in the title role of this Play he has found the most emphatic suitable medium for his remarkable talent since his appearance upon the stage. The accuracy of his portrayal together with the natural ability he brings to his work had united in producing an entirely new conception of pure American Drama. While the unanimous approval of the press and the unstinted appreciation of the public has resulted in a eulogy unique in dramatic annals.

"The Girl and The Trap"

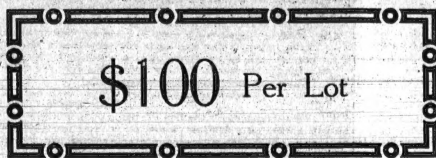

Fan of the real upstart kid, predominates in Carlos' unskipped laughing comedy success "The Girl and The Trap," which comes to the Blairmore opera house Friday May 31, but there are other things besides. The play tells an absorbing heart story of a supposed wrong to a loving husband, which happily, comes out alright in the end. Then, too, there are a great of startlingly dramatic situations, the exposure of a real automobile etc., etc. It is a performance that should certainly be seen by everyone who enjoys a clean comedy drama.

"Anyone desirous of joining "B" Squadron, 23rd Alberta Rangers, willing to go into camp at Calgary from 18th to 29th June, can obtain further information from J. W. Gresham any evening, who will swear them in. Uniform and equipment provided free. If sufficient names are forthcoming to form a troop in the vicinity, Blairmore will be made a permanent troop headquarters, and the government will send a special instructor for the purpose of giving preliminary drills and instruct for several days preceding encampment.

"Casey Jones," with Ollie Mack in the leading role, will appear at the Blairmore opera house on Saturday, June 16th.

His Matrimonial Spurs

How After a Defeat by a Man He Won Them From a Woman

By R. A. MITCHEL

The shores of Lake Lemna, commonly called Lake Lenax, thick with historical incidents. The city of Geneva was the home of Calvin, Rousseau, Voltaire, Mme. de Staël and other celebrated names. The castle where Bonaparte was so long a prisoner, as related in Byron's poem, "At Veray, on a hillside some distance back above the town and partly hidden by the trees surrounding it, is the old castle of Blonay. There is a story—a true story—with which this castle is connected dating a way back to the twelfth century. Those were the days of feudalism, and the Blonays, who built and owned the castle were feudal lords of the country. They seem to have been in favor of their sovereigns, for they fled various offices of trust under them. The Blonays came across the lake from Châillon and built the castle in 1175.

One day a number of knights of Turin, the capital of Savoy, were wrangling over the question whether marriage made a man more efficient as a soldier or less so. The married knights claimed that a wedded soldier would not only be unwilling to his reputation for bravery on his own account, but also on account of his wife and children. The unmarried knights declared that they were more efficient because they had only themselves to live for, whereas having a lovely wife and little ones the dread of separation from them by death would sap their courage. The dispute between the knights of Turin waxed hot, and since the question could be settled only by being put to the test, challenges began to fly between the bachelors and the bachelors, and it looked as if many families would be made fatherless and many young men well fitted to become progenitors would live the dust.

Perhaps it was that the reigning Count of Savoy, fearing to lose so much, and De Bresse tall and slender, no superfluous fat mingled with his hard muscles. At the signal the two, pointing their lances, made a dash at each other.

At this first onset neither was unscathed, neither wounded. Again and again their lances came together, and at last in one of these encounters De Bresse's lance was shattered, and he was left defenseless. The married knight had won.

Corsant de Bresse rode up before the queen, dismounted, knelt and with hanging head cried for mercy. He repeated the ceremony to the other ladies to whom the terms of the tournament compelled him to subject himself and then rode away to Veray to bend the knee to the wife of his conqueror.

Now, in those days there were no telephones or telegrams in that land. Indeed, there were no regular mails. One afternoon Mme. de Blonay, who was ignorant of the tournament, was sitting on her castle terrace with her baby on her lap, looking out on the placid waters of Lake Lemna. A multi-colored flag ascended the hill, and dismounting below where the lady sat, came up to the terrace and, bending the knee, said:

"You cry me mercy," exclaimed the astonished woman. "You, an armed knight, cry mercy of me, not only without reason, but incumbered with my baby."

"Yes, madam. I am Corsant de Bresse. I have met your husband in battle. He is the champion of the knights of Turin, I representing the single knights. I have been conquered by him, and by the terms of the tournament I have come to cry mercy from his wife."

As soon as Mme. de Blonay understood the situation, recognizing the fact that her husband had won victory for marriage, she conceived the idea of winning a second victory, not with lance or battailon, but with woman's own weapons.

"Arise, Sir Knight," she said. "I grant you mercy on one condition."

"That you be my guest at a feast which I shall give in your honor with the nobles living around about."

"Thanks, madame, that you accompany your mercy with a boon instead of a penance. I will be your guest most willingly."

Immediately Mme. de Blonay dispatched messengers to those to be invited to the feast, including her young and beautiful cousin, Yolande de Villette. When all were seated, Mme. de Blonay placed before her, seated Corsant de Bresse where he could feast his eyes on her beauty. There was a clinking of glasses and many a word of good natured derision flung at the bachelor cause in the recent contest.

"Arise," she said. "I had a wife to defend me against this rally."

He accompanied the words with a look of appeal at Yolande, who blushed and lowered her eyes.

Cries of "Deserters!" "Renegades!" and the like were hurled at him from the bachelors present, while the "Comers!" "Welcome to our ranks!" and similar badinage came from the married persons.

After the guests were gone De Bresse declared to Mme. de Blonay that he had had enough of the unmarried side, and since he had become a married man, he begged that she would intercede for him with Yolande.

"How, now, Sir Knight," said the lady. "Having been beaten at feats of arms by a married man, do you now beg the assistance of a married woman?"

"By my spurs, madame! I am more ashamed to fight with you than of either you or your husband."

"Well, then, you must either win your matrimonial spurs as you have pointed to the victor, or else remain a craven."

With that she opened a door and ushered him into a room with a wall of arms by a married man. There has not been handed down, except that after awhile De Bresse came out, strutting like a peacock, and forcing his hostess to admit that he had won his fight far more easily than her husband had vanquished him in the tourney.

After a brief courtship the married lady rode back to Turin. He bore a scrap of paper from Mme. Blonay to her husband, on which she had written: "You have conquered with man's I have gained a victory for the same cause with woman's weapons. I with you fenced with an invulnerable lance, I with a beautiful woman."

Corsant de Bresse, returning an affianced husband, excited a great deal of admiration in Turin. The married knights welcomed him as among their number, and the single knights talked of another tournament in which the renegade should defend his newly chosen side against one of their number, who should punish him for his desertion. But the Count of Savoy forbade any further fighting, and there being demoralization among the bachelors both on account of their defeat and De Bresse's joining the enemy's ranks, many more deserted, and many more married.

And you who visit northern Italy take a little steamer plying around the lake and among other sights viewed from the boat look at Castle Blonay. You can fancy a good woman sitting on the terrace 700 years ago with a baby on her lap and a plumed knight riding up to her.

And remembering how he rode again down that same slope an engaged man, and how he rode up again a married man, the side for which he had recently fought, you will say to yourself, "Verily, a woman's wit is mightier than the sword."

MYSTIC ALGIERS.

It Is Not a City For Women Visitors to Explore Alone.

No foreigner knows what the Arab does to his women. He is a man to understand what he thinks. Within his house he is as much master in Algeria as he is in Mecca, so long as he avoids the appearance of what the infidel calls evil and so long as he complies with certain demands, equally foolish and outrageous to him, in respect of religion; vaccination, sanitation and the like.

To any one who has ever seen for a moment behind the veil of native life there is something almost terrifying about the impenetrable mystery of these alien houses. Things happen there and human nature assumes aspects there of which the western world never dreams. I confess to being unscrupulous when I see careless and ignorant foreigners—men and women—walking alone in the native quarters of eastern towns.

Suppose one of these dark doors suddenly opened. The stranger he dragged quietly within and the door shut. That stranger might disappear forever without leaving a single trace. It would be useless to assume that the authorities were prepared to ransack every house to its most private apartments in a whole district, and that that would be, if not to provoke a revolt, at least to stir up such dangerous unrest and hostility as to make it impossible.

What might happen to that stranger is best not considered. If his or her capriciousness or moodiness were to be no more trace than the spot where the stone has fallen into the sea. Such an event is, of course, very unlikely, but it has horribly happened and might happen again. Sir Henry Norman, M. P., is a Scribner.

A ROMANCE OF TRADE.

The Start and Rise of the Famous Krupp.

The famous cannon foundry of Krupp, at Essen, was established in 1811 by Frederick Krupp, who abandoned a successful grocery business for the instigation of his brothers named Von Knecht in order to devote himself to the manufacture of cast steel.

The process was that of the Krupp family, and the article itself went under the name of "English steel" because it was imported from England. Krupp, the military, and the military or pretended to have technical knowledge. The firm started its operations in an old water power mill at Altenessen. The expenses were enormous, and the results were unsuccessful. For nearly two years they did their best, but all their efforts to produce "English steel" failed. In the end Krupp decided to get rid of them after having spent one half of his fortune in experiments and took over the management of the work himself.

For a long time he had no luck, and it was only after some years of disappointment and labor that a satisfactory result was produced. It was then that Alfred took the business first really began to flourish. Its exhibit at the London exposition of 1851 revealed to the world that a little known German firm was producing iron and steel that could not be bettered by the industry of any other country. Orders from the Prussian government followed, and the name and fortune of the firm were made—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Built in Blood.

The winter palace of the czars was built in blood. Almost every stone of the walls and every square yard of the plaster lining their cost the lives of men. Nicholas had given the order that the palace must be rebuilt in a year, and what was human life against the despotism of the tsar? He thought not.

He kept at work day and night, with the palace heated at 30 R. to dry the walls rapidly, while the temperature outside was often 30 degrees below zero. The men could only work with ice packs on their heads, and, experiencing a daily change of 60 degrees, they died by the score every day. At the end of the year the death roll was some thousands, but the palace was finished.

A Wise Woman.

"Now, for $2," announced the star gazer. "I will furnish you with a platter which will make your husband love you to the exclusion of all others."

"I don't think I'll invest," decided the practical housewife. "But if you have a platter which will make him bring home some of his salary on pay day I'll allow you a percentage on all sums he brings home."

Purely Speculative. "I have always been interested," said little Binka, "in the utilization of waste. Now, where do you suppose all these burnt tires go to the end?"

"I don't know," said the genial philosopher, "but if they go where most people consign 'em there must be a terrible smell of rubber in the hereafter."

Consideration.

"Do you think women have a sense of consideration?" "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But I think they have become accustomed to restrain their laughter through a sense of consideration for some man's feelings."

PERILOUS POSING.

Getting "Human Interest" in the Camera Man's Pictures.

A. W. Dimock in Outline tells of his days as a professional distributor of snakes, lizards, tarpon, etc., for his camera man and of a partial drowning experience to supply the "human interest." To quote him:

"When a coiled rattlesnake needed stirring up I shook a short stick in his face. If we caught a big 'gator or crocodile, I was the one to keep between it and its home, in river or bay, and discourage with a club its advance. When our captive lynx was let out of his cage to pose it was my business to keep him busy with fish or otherwise lest he eat the camera man. I was expected to hypnotize any bird, from a tern to a turkey buzzard, while the camera man got in his work."

"Even tarpon fishing was made adventurous, and half a dozen times a day I heard the shout:

"Can't you pull your canoe nearer the fish? I must have human interest."

"Then I dragged on the line till the canoe was over a fish that was bigger than I, which often shot ten feet over my head, so that I was obliged to jump, when instead of being promptly rescued I was likely to hear the call:

"Swim further out, where the light is better!"

RILED THE ART STUDENT.

He Resented at First the Comments of His Unlucky Critic.

An art student was copying one of Abbott S. Thayer's paintings at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York city, when he was called to the attention of a young man who looked as if he might be a mechanic approached and, posing himself at the young man's elbow, watched him as he labored over his subject.

"You've got the angle of the mouth wrong, and the left eye is too oblique," remarked the man dressed in work clothes. The student blushed angrily, and the hand that wielded the brush trembled slightly, but he took no notice of the unbidden criticism.

"You've got the color of the flesh too yellow in your flesh tint," continued the man. "Still so reply from the student, who ostentatiously slipped on more yellow paint on the nose."

"Did you hear what I said?" questioned the man. "Yes," it responded the student, wrathfully, turning and glaring at his modest looking critic. "What do you know about it, anyway?"

"I might tell you something about it," was the smiling response. "It was I who painted the picture."—New York Press.

Beats and Spurs.

A contemporary manuscript account of the diet of Hattusili, held in 1800 by the Emperor Ferdinand I, the son of the Emperor Frederick, is a curious document. Adolphus of Sweden in Germany, mentions as a remarkable fact that the Hungarian cavalry were trained to wear their spurs on their boot soles. It is difficult to credit that these spurs were fixed on the flat of the foot, for the horse would be unable to move. The spurs were fixed on the heel of the boot, and the horse would be unable to move.

A Penguin Wedder. Dr. Charcot in a lecture on antarctic experiences referred to the amusing antics of the penguin, which, he said, were very much like human beings in their behavior. Sometimes a couple of betrothed penguins could be seen seated close together in formal fashion in the snow, and the male would give a blow of the beak and observation had shown that subsequently the same couple attended before a single penguin, who might be a penguin or the registrar, for the positions of all three were similar to those occupied by the minister in a wedding. The bridegroom sat at a wedding—London News.

Letters of Marque.

Letters of marque and reprisal, as they were called, were first issued in 1563 by the king of France to give leave to retaliate beyond the marches or limits of a country for wrongs suffered at the hands of a power nominally at peace. In this way France was able to stand at Portugal. About 100 years later two Hanes towns in Mecklenburg, wishing to relieve their prince, who was beleaguered in Stockholm, issued letters of marque—thieves' Niter, as the sufferers called them—to all the rascals of the Baltic authorizing them to retaliate on the coast. This done, they turned themselves into a confederacy of sea robbers known as Victualing brothers, and rendered the Scandinavians unsafe for half a century.

Reduced.

"I hear the Federbushs are in greatly reduced circumstances." "Are they? How did they lose their money?" "They haven't lost their money. Mr. Federbush has had typhoid fever and is a mere walking skeleton, and his wife has been trying a new anti-dandruff remedy which has brought her weight down nearly forty pounds."—Judge's Library.

Nash Was Lucky.

"What are you smiling about?" asked Noah. "I was just thinking," replied Zephaniah. "I was so lucky I was able to get ahead and build this ark without waiting for an appropriation from congress."—Washington Star.

Not on the Level.

"How can mountain climbers be so level?" "How can you?" "How can such a thing as mountain climbing be on the level?"—Baltimore American.

AN ENGINE OF TORTURE.

The Pillory Was Not Abolished in England Until 1837.

The pillory was done away with by act of parliament in the year 1837, and it is amazing that it should have endured until that date, for it was a mode of punishment which could be made so effective and barbarous as to be a crying scandal to any nation. This engine of torture seems to have been known before the conquest under the name of "struth," which is pleasantly suggestive of its functions.

Edward I. enacted that all stretch necks should be made of a proper size so that the life of the occupant should not be endangered, and a print of the reign of Henry III. shows very clearly what the pillory was like in those days. The culprit was mounted upon a stool, at one side of which was fixed a pole, supporting a pair of boards joined together and with holes cut in them large enough to admit the wrists and neck.

The hands and arms were thus held out with the face, and the appalling stiffness which this must have caused can well be imagined. Thus confined and powerless, the offender was placed in some public spot, where the ruffian employed themselves hurling dirt, sticks and stones at him until they were tired and until the object of the punishment, as an infrequently came to pass.

It would seem that primarily the pillory was intended for cheats of all kinds, such as swindlers, false dealers in horses, coal, corn, etc., and we read in Fabian that the mayor of London in 1228 held office, correction upon heads for making bread of light weight. He caused drivers of men to be put in the pillory, as also one Augustus Darnley for selling of man's blood butter. Soothing and other magic arts were also punished with the pillory.

It may appear that famous men did not appear in the pillory until after 1837, when a star chamber decree forbade the printing of any book or pamphlet without the sanction of the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of London or the university authorities and also made an order that any student who committed a felony and set up a printing press should not only be pilloried, but also whipped through the city of London.

Staford is told by a friend of the way in which three men underwent their pillorying. They stood two hours in the pillory. The place was full of people, and the crowd was howling terribly, especially when Barton was whipped. Dr. Bastwick was very merry. His wife, Dr. Poo's daughter, got a stool and kissed him.—London Globe.

Gave Him a Warm Tip.

"Yes, it's a lot of trouble to raise beer, but you must know how to get it," said a publican. "I'll tell you a story about that very point. A man who looked as if he hadn't had anything to eat for a while or been in the back fence of my park some time ago. I had my eye on him, and he saw I had my eye on him, so he started up a conversation."

"Must be a lot of expense to keep up such a lot of fowls," he said. "Not such a much," said I.

"What are the principal items?" he wanted to know.

"Powder an' shot," I told him. "Yes," do you know, he came back to ask me no more questions? Diplomacy is a good thing to raise hens with too."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

First Mail Coach in 1784.

A theater owner was responsible for the first mail coach in 1784. John Palmer, Bath, England, saw that it took four days to get his actors from London. He went to the government authorities and persuaded them to start a number of coaches to carry the mails and that these coaches should be built for speed and drawn by the fastest animals in England. In a little while a revolution was worked.

A Gossipy Mother.

"A gossiping woman makes me tired," observed small Donald. "What's a gossiping woman?" asked his younger brother.

"One who tells everything she knows," explained Donald. "Mamma is one. Every time we misbehave she runs and tells papa."—Chicago News.

A Mean Retort.

"If you don't stop talking," cautioned the husband, "I'll not be able to sleep." "That's funny," answered the wife. "When a girl angers for a husband she has to talk a great deal." "I know. But there's a difference between girls and mothers."

Woman's World

Wives of Prominent Democrats to Have Harmony Feast.

MISS CHAMP CLARK—MRS. WOODROW WILSON.

A Dolly Madison May time breakfast which will bring together the wives of Democratic leaders throughout the country is planned for May 20 by Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the speaker of the house; Mrs. Henry D. Clayton, wife of Representative Clayton of Alabama; and Mrs. Owen W. Underwood, wife of the leader of the majority in the lower branch of congress. The breakfast is designed to bring together the wives of the country at the same time as the men come together from time to time at the banquet board for good fellowship and mutual acquaintance.

It will be held at one of the big hotels in Washington, and the list of those to be invited as guests of honor includes Mrs. Grover Cleveland, Mrs. New Jersey, widow of former President Cleveland; Mrs. Bryan, wife of William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska; Mrs. Alton Brooks Parker, wife of Judge Parker of New York, who once was the Democratic presidential candidate; Mrs. Adlai B. Stevenson of Illinois, whose husband was vice president during one of former President Cleveland's administrations.

Mrs. Clark is to be the toastmaster of the occasion, and the list of those who are eligible as guests will include the wives of Democratic members of the senate and house of members of the former Democratic cabinets, of the Democratic governors, governors elect or Democratic nominees for governor, and the Democratic justices of the supreme court, of the Democratic national committee members and of prominent Democratic residents of the district.

The occasion, it is pointed out, will have special significance from the characteristic attributes of Dolly Madison, the first lady of the republic, the women of the democracy, who was one of the most forceful women who ever presided over the White House.

When a Woman Buys Palamas.

The dashing haberdasher indicated the occupant of a polo coat that had just whisked out his front door with a bundle under her arm.

"That young woman," said he emphatically, "bought those sunset pink pajamas to wear herself, and I deduce, furthermore, that she is not married. You can't help noticing little things like that when you look at events with your eyes open."

"How do I know? Let your own ears be the jury. Here's what happened when she bought 'em."

"She wanted to look at some pajamas, and she was a sort of vocal bluish in her voice when she asked hastily that they were for her husband. What she did she want, I inquired."

"Well, if—she wasn't sure. But she just happened to remember that her husband was about as high and as wide as she was, and she could tell by holding up the garment at arm's length the arms whether they would fit him or not. That ancient dodge is as accurate as a sextant."

"Accept direct from one that's in the business, the average man is about as conservative and careful about the shade of his mattress uniform as he is about that of his street clothes. He might let his wife buy him neckties—his pajamas seldom, if ever."

A banquet was held in the Socialist Hall on Friday night in honor of Mr. J. R. Macdonald who leaves shortly. During the course of the evening Mr. Donald McKay made a few well chosen remarks in praise of the honored guest and presented him with a gold watch as a token of the appreciation of the citizens of Bellevue. A very pleasant evening was spent and was participated in by a large number of people.

A fast game of football was played on Saturday between Coal Creek and Bellevue in the Crows' Nest Pass league. Bellevue had the best of the argument throughout and won by a score of one to nothing. Bellevue's goal was kicked by Arnold Varley in the first half. Our team was weakened in the second half by injuries happening to Parrie and Tristin and for a while we played with only nine men but Coal Creek was unable to score.

Owing to the resignation of Messrs. Halworth and Macdonald from the school board, an election was held on Monday to fill the vacancies. This event was the warmest contest ever held in any election in Bellevue.

The candidates were Donald McKay,

Sam Willinsky Found Guilty of Murder Will Hang in July

The final act in the murder trial which had engaged the attention of the supreme court at Macleod for four days was staged on Friday afternoon last when a jury of twelve returned to the court room, after having been out eight short minutes, and informed the court that they had found Sam Willinsky guilty of murdering George Lakatoz, at Frank, on February 18th.

Chief Justice Harvey, after telling the prisoner to stand up, told Willinsky that the sentence of the court was that he be taken to the Macleod jail on July 26th and there be hanged by the neck until dead. The prisoner took the sentence coolly and while on his way back to the cell said that he wished that the court would hang him the following day instead of keeping him waiting over two months.

It will be remembered that the murdering of George Lakatoz was committed near the mines of the Canadian Coal Consolidated during the still watches of the night that awful tragedy sent a shudder all over Frank as well as startling the whole Pass. It seems that Willinsky tried to make love to the unfortunate man's wife and to win her as his own. Before the latter could be successfully carried out it was necessary to get Lakatoz out of the way, and it appears from the evidence given at the trial that it was with the hope of capturing Mrs. Lakatoz and making her his wife that the foul murder was committed.

How to Waste Money
And Where to Save it

Under the above heading there appears a very interesting article in a recent number of T. P.'s Weekly.

The best way to waste money, it is suggested, is keep it in the pocket. Then, whenever one sees a thing which he fancies he would like to buy it at once; otherwise, he may forget it, or, having had time to think it over, conclude that he can get along without it.

With the money in one's pocket we are always ready to receive the genius with

"The talk that will make a man think that he needs

The thing that he doesn't; the talk that breeds

In the swim fill that up-to-date frill he's bought."

Some useful suggestions are also made as to how money may be saved, the chief of which is to be systematic in the expenditure of it, to make a careful estimate under such headings as household expenditures, food, rent, fuel, clothes, etc., not forgetting something for "The Rainy Day."

And for this purpose the writer would no doubt, had he been writing for the eyes of Canadians only, have recommended the Canadian Government Assistance System as giving the largest possible return with the best possible security. By investing a fraction of your income in this way you may, whether you be man or woman, insure an old age of freedom from want or dependence. Ask your Postmaster for literature on the subject, or write to the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, who will tell you all you wish to know about the system, and how you should proceed to make the provision suggested.

E. W. Christie, Walter Warn and W. J. Cole. It was evident that there were deeply interested sides in the contest and much loud talking and abusive language was heard at times throughout the polling. The final result declared E. W. Christie and W. J. Cole elected. As there were some irregularities, there is talk of a protest being entered and in all probability the election will be declared void and a new election held to the best future.

Happenings in and Around Frank

The regular fortnightly ball takes place at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium tonight (Thursday).

Rev. W. T. Young left on Wednesday morning to attend to Methodist District meeting at Macleod. He returned to Frank on the following evening.

J. M. Howell, a popular druggist of Greensburg, Ky., says, "We use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in our own household and know it is excellent." For sale by all dealers.

Survivors are busy getting the new townsite in a condition to be populated. The course of the Old Man river may be changed in some places so as to make the property as large and convenient as possible.

At a meeting of the trustees of Knox Methodist church, held last week end, the remaining debt on the church property was totally wiped off and now the Methodists of this town have an institution free from debt.

Is there anything in all this world that is of more importance to you than good digestion? Food must be eaten to sustain life and must be digested and converted into blood. When the digestion fails the whole body suffers. Chamberlain's Tablets are a rational and reliable cure for indigestion. They increase the flow of bile, purify the blood, strengthen the stomach, and tone up the whole digestive apparatus to a natural and healthy action. For sale by all dealers.

Miners Return to Work at Bellevue

The suspension of work which gave the miners of Bellevue a holiday last week came to an end on Monday when the men resumed work according to the decision of the arbitration Commission. This Commission which is appointed under the Labor disputes Act convened on Wednesday of this week and an early report is looked for.
